DURHAM, NH – President Barack Obama and former Massachusetts Governor Mitt Romney are tied in New Hampshire as the campaign enters the final weekend. The race for Governor remains too close to call with Democrat Maggie Hassan holding a narrow advantage over Republican Ovide Lamontagne.

These findings are based on the latest WMUR Granite State Poll conducted by the University of New Hampshire Survey Center. Five hundred and two (502) randomly selected New Hampshire likely voters were interviewed by landline and cellular telephone between October 31 and November 2, 2012. The margin of sampling error for the survey is +/- 4.4 percent. In the following charts and tables, percentages may not sum to 100% due to rounding.

2012 Presidential Election

Mitt Romney has closed the gap with Barack Obama in the Granite State, and the two are now locked in a dead heat. In the most recent Granite State Poll, 47% of likely New Hampshire voters say they will vote for Obama, 47% say they will vote for Romney, 2% prefer some other candidate, and 4% are undecided.

When undecided voters are asked which candidate they lean toward, Obama and Romney remain tied, with 48% for Obama, 48% for Romney, 2% for some other candidate, and 3% remain undecided.

Obama has lost considerable support since 2008 as only 87% of 2008 Obama voters say they will vote for him this time while 94% of McCain voters say they will vote for Romney.

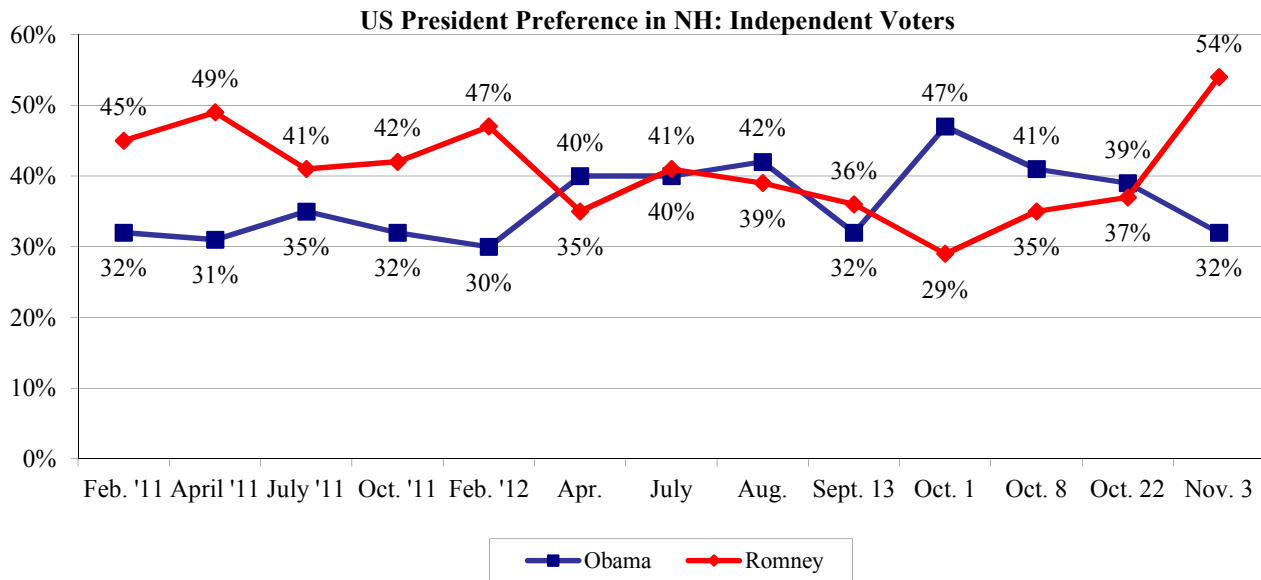

Romney runs strongest in the vote rich Manchester area and in towns along the Massachusetts border while Obama gets more support in the North Country and in the Connecticut River valley.

There is a pronounced gender gap, but neither candidate benefits. Obama leads among women by 58% to 40% while Romney leads among men, 57% to 38%. There is also a religious divide -- among regular church goers, Romney holds a 69% to 29% lead while Obama leads by 60% to 34% among people who never attend church services.

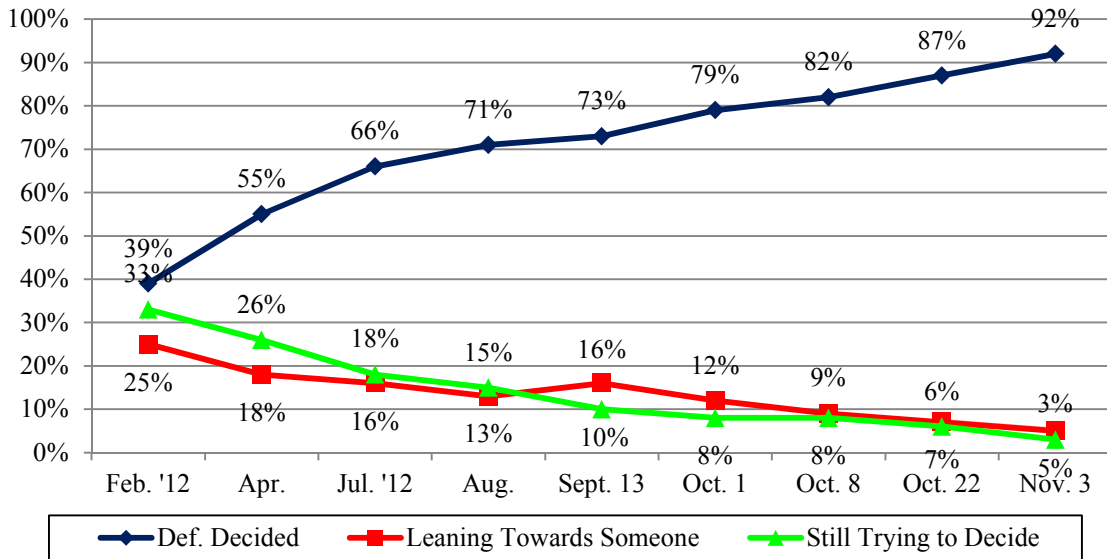

Both candidates have secured their bases -- Obama currently has the support of 95% of New Hampshire Democrats, and Romney has the support of 95% of Republicans. Independents are breaking heavily to Romney -- 54% say they will vote for Romney while only 32% say they will vote for Obama. "The movement of Independents to Romney is the most significant factor in his making this race a dead heat," said Andrew Smith, Director of the UNH Survey Center. "Two weeks ago, independents were divided in who they would support."

Only a small percentage of New Hampshire voters are "persuadable." Currently, 92% of likely New Hampshire voters say they have definitely decided who they will vote for in November, 5% are leaning towards a candidate, and 3% are still trying to decide. Among voters who prefer a candidate, 97% say they are firm in their choice while only 3% say they could change their minds.

NH 2012 Gubernatorial Candidates

Democrat Maggie Hassan has maintained her slim advantage over Republican Ovide Lamontagne, but more than one in ten likely voters remain undecided. In the most recent Granite State Poll, 45% of likely general election voters say they would currently vote for Hassan, 40% prefer Lamontagne, 1% favor Libertarian candidate John Babiartz, 2% favor some other candidate, and 13% are undecided.

NH Governor: Lamontagne vs. Hassan
(Likely 2012 General Election Voters)

When undecided voters are asked which candidate they lean toward supporting, 47% of likely voters say they will vote for Hassan, 42% for Lamontagne, 1% favor Babiartz, 2% prefer some other candidate, and 8% remain undecided.

Hassan has a small advantage in crossover voting with 7% of Romney voters saying they will vote for Hassan while only 2% of Obama supporters say they will vote for Lamontagne. There is also a gender gap favoring Hassan – she leads by 24 percentage points among women while Lamontagne leads by 14 percentage points among men.

Granite State Poll Methodology

These findings are based on the latest WMUR Granite State Poll conducted by the University of New Hampshire Survey Center. Five hundred and two (502) randomly selected New Hampshire likely voters were interviewed by landline and cellular telephone between October 31 and November 2, 2012. The margin of sampling error for the survey is +/- 4.4 percent.

The data have been weighted to adjust for numbers of adults and telephone lines within households, respondent sex, and region of the state. In addition to potential sampling error, all surveys have other potential sources of non-sampling error including question order effects, question wording effects, and non-response. In the following tables, percentages may not sum to 100% due to rounding.
